The New York Sun and Herald are proving themselves Job's con-solers in the present dire affliction of the democratic paralysis. The editors of these papers are wise enough to read the hand-writing on the wall, and are getting ready to tumble in a soft place. Dana thus unburdens himself in a recent issue:

As much as our candidate excels in writing letters, we must deferentially advise him not to write any more.

Every one knows he favors a tariff which will yield the utmost protection to American industries, and especially to the democratic party. But if he must write on a tariff, let him expressly state that if it had been left to him he would have put a prohibitory tariff on the readmission of unrepentant rebels to citizens' rights after the close of the war.

against a rough-stone New England democratic party, in making this nomination, resembled him, only, if report be true, they did not get the twenty-five cent.

The democrats have sustained an unexpected and mortifying defeat in Indiana and Ohio. It is disastrous, and may prove fatal. It is silly to make light of it, and idle to try to whittle it away by cunning calculations and adroit figuring. The democrats are beaten, badly beaten—whether beaten to death or not is the only question.

Such utterances as these are bad enough for our democratic friends, but the Herald caps this climax of discouragement by the following:

Even with the electoral vote of New York Hancock's chances seem slender enough just now. New York alone can not save him. He needs, in addition, New Jersey and Connecticut—not one of these states, but both. Can he get both? It is doubtful now whether he can get either; it is next to certain that he can not get both of them. They are manufacturing a trifling issue, which is urged by the republicans with such success in the later stages of the canvass in Ohio and Indiana, will be more potent in Connecticut and New Jersey, where manufacturers bear an altogether larger proportion to the general industry.

The democratic national platform, which tolerates a tariff for revenue only, will be pretty sure to defeat the party in such states as New Jersey and Connecticut, whose prosperity is bound up with their manufactures.

It has not been many weeks since the Herald was the widest quoted paper in the United States as far as the democrats are concerned.

Then, our side of the house did not care to give publicity to its opinions; but now the tables have turned and we give them, while the democrats suppress them.

In this connection the CHRONI-CLE has a little pyramid that it will furnish its democratic readers as a matter of further consolation. It is taken from the Chicago Tribune, and while inaccurate in two particulars, yet it will do. Virginia and Florida both belong to the larger structure, but the Tribune, out of pure kindness, has given them to

Hancock and the CHRONICLE scorns to be outdone in generosity. Look well at it and ponder:
